ground that he is twice as heavy as the man who weighs one hundred and fifty tury from an application.—It is astonishing that in this modern, and supposed to be more refined age, that a custom still exists which originated in the Fifteenth Cenday eggaged chiefly in discussing the distribution of Representatives under the New Constitution Act. We constituted and the New Constitution Act. We constituted at the respect of the New Constitution Act. We constituted at the respect of the Main and only has one vote, if extent of territory instead of population be set up as the basis of representation. Hereafter if the the population of the Main and increases in a greater ratio than on the Island, or if any section of the Main increases in a greater ratio than on the Island, or if any section of the Main increases in a greater ratio than on the Island, or if any section of the Main increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or if any section of the Main increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island or island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island increases in a greater ratio than on the Island incre for Cariboo, New Westminster, Yale, Lillooef, and Kootensy unfortunately per to revise the representation, and give to the locality having increased population a proportionate increase of representation. Now, we are willing to and leave the future to take care of its. cede that they contended for more recentation for the so called Mainland representation for the so called Mainland Section, believeing that they were demanding what was right. It is to us a matter of regret nevertheless that we cannot agree with their views of the question,—We say regret for we would have much preferred to have seen less sectional feeling and a greater inclination to represent men rather than territory. As it is, however, we propose to deal with matters as they are—that is with the views taken by the Government and Island Members, that twelve Swiss authorities to allow the transportation. deal with matters as they are—that is with the views taken by the Government and Island Members, that twelve members for Vancouver Island and 13 for of the sick through Switzerland, The request the Mainland is a just division, and with the assertion of the Mainlandmembers that Vancouver Island ought to have eleven were cut of, and are being driven up on the members and the Mainland fourteen. Now Swiss frontier.

The bombardment of Belfort continues. required in frameing a constitution for a new country—and a popular constitution at that—it is freedom from all sectional bies in the constitution-makers. Sectional feeling if engrafted on the constitution in words and sentinces in directory or nandatory provisions is bound and surely dend to produce a most pernicious effect. The constitution-makers of the States, of the United States, have shown such dom from sectional feeling as to entitle them to the admiration of their co-The doctrine that all men are free and equal has been the foundation on which they have erected their noble supersiructures. Natural justice has been their guide, and they have succeeded beyond all previous example in working free institutions on the representative principle: If they had attempted for a coment to guarantee to one man a greater share of power than another in eir organic acts, there would long ere has prevailed in the Great Republic, with one exception for a hundred years.

There they have ever based representation not on acreage, but on manhood; and as population increased in one section more than another their levels and north without difficulty.

Berlin, Feb. I—Crders are given for discontinuing the dispatch of troops to France.

The telegraph reports of the Emperor's return to Berlin are unfounded. He will not arrive before a definite treaty of peace is a definite treaty of the dispatch of troops to France. this have been an end to the harmony that re than another, their legislatures the State so that the great principle of the State so that the great principle of the equality of man and the right to be equally represented should not be violated. New in order to frame our constitution, we cannot do better nor act more of the restoration of the Empire, with Engene visely than to free ourselves from all as regent.

The Emperor's confidential aide-de-camp arrived at Chiselburst to-day.

St. Persuspune, Jan. 31—Prince Withgenstein Russian Minister to Paris has started for sent as nearly as possible the same number of men. The Government, we believe, has attempted to do that as marry as possible in the bill now before the Council, and our readers will agree with us in this, if they will follow us through the returns of population in the Government Blue Book for 1869.

This work it will be borne in mind was powers must learn, that Austria is ready for the continuous for the co not prepared for election purposes but as a reference; and bence is a good criterion. New the Bine Book of 1869 sets down the civilized population exclusive of 247 Chinamen, on Vancouver Island at 4.748; and the Mainland population at 3,681, exclusive of 1,700 Chinese. Hence there was a difference in 1868 in the civilized population in favor of the Island of 1,067. Now we have no reason to conclude that there is the civilized population in favor of the Island of 1,067. Now we have no reason to conclude that there is to day any numerical difference in the population of the Colony—the Mainland and Island. Hence if the remainder, there would be 887 civilized persons, male and female, to each member, and Vancouver Island would have forteen members and the Mainland clean. As the representation has As the representation has, er, been distributed in the Con-ica Act, the Mainland gets thir-San Farreiro, Jan. 1—Flour is increased demand, one vessel is chartered to take a full load for England, and another dispatched to the first entitled on the basis of population. It is a fashion in the States when forming the what the population of a district to be answered that it cast so many to be answered that it cast so many to be answered that there were the last election. Now following a precedent, we find that there were the under the restricted franchise of full. Only two vessels are loading, both of chick it is entitled on the basis of population. It is a fashion in the States when case also what the population of a district is to be answered that it cast so many this precedent, we find that there were cost under the restricted franchise of 1870 in Vancouver Island 1848 votes last year, and on the Mainland 1,213.

Here too then is evidence of fairness in full. Only two vessels are loading, both of 1870 in Vancouver Island 1848 votes last year, and on the Mainland 1,213. Here too then is evidence of fairness in the proposed general distribution of representation over what some people persistently speak of as the two sections of the Colony. How any one can in view of the fact that the total population, iviliand, on the island is 135 more than the Mainland or any equal,—how any one can the Mainland than for the Mainland than for the Island we cannot conceive. Any attempt to do so, is clearly contrary to covery consideration of the equality of the company to-day filed a protest with the Marican Consul, setting forth that in consequence of the Consul's refusing to clear vessels for Magdalena Bay, and notifying the public that shipments of goods there would render their goods flable to seiture, as there was no Cuatom House there, and no Port of Entry recognized by law, the Company had been greatly damaged; vessel owners refusing to charter their yessels, and immigrants being deterred from agoing there, and the Company would claim damages from the Mexican Government.

Dr. Helmcken resumed—was sorry to see, the feeling between the Mainland and Island, brought up—it was not proposed to divide the Colony in that view; it was merely a matter of sentiment to give one member more to the Mainland. He was perfectly convinced that the population of the Island was more than that of the Mainland, and he considered it his duty, and maintained that the Island had a right to an equal number of representatives; the Island was more settled, and the tatives; the Island was more settled, and the population more permanent—not so nomadic as on the Mainland—and therefore more entitled to representation. He wouldn't say the whole population of the Mainland was nomadic—but the permanent population of the say the whole population of the Mainland was nomadic—but the permanent population of the madic—but the permanent population of the say the say of the say whole population of the Mainland was no-madic—but the permanent population of the Island was much greater, and they would be able to show as they went along, that every one of the Island districts had more voters, than the same number of districts on the career, in which he witnessed such a distinction—as Mainland and Island;—he never saw sides turn out, as in this Session, and he regetting warm over it—the fate of the amend-ment was already settled. He felt that the ground had already been gone over-but as a matter of interest to both sections of the Colony, he felt he could not allow the amendment to pass without a few words. What are the claims of the two districts? His bonest convictions were, that the Mainland should have fourteen, and the Island eleven members. He was more familiar with the country than gentlemen who had just spoken and who would vote against them on that question; the distribution, under existing circumstances—was it right or proper? He Mr. Nelson was interested to know on would no more favour, the proposition of some, to give ten to the Island, and fifteen to to the Mainland, as he would thirteen to the latter, and twelve to the former; his proposition was fourteen and eleven, respectively

Twenty-five members for the whole popula-tion of the Colony, was out of proportion to the population; it was rather anticipatory than otherwise. It would, perhaps, happen too, that some of the Mainland districts would be represented by a metropolisan mem-ber, and in that case it would throw the majority into the hands of the Islatd. In Can-ada, and other countries, that rule often obtains—and there is danger in throwing the preponderance of power into the hands of the reasons why the object of the amendment should be carried out. The expression, no-madic, could not be applied to the Mainland, any more than it could be to the colliers of Nanaimo, or to the lumberers of Sooke. It

Mr. Humphreys seconded the amendment. Hon. Mr. Trutch, from the remarks made, was fully convinced of the wisdom of the course adopted by the Government in this matter, and it was absolutely necessary that the Executive should have acted as umpire between, what is usually known as contending sections of the Colony. It was essential that some one should act as umpire. So far as the distribution was concerned, the Government was twitted with the emptiness of the speculations made. Mainland members would not join as against the Island members. The Bill, when law, is open to amendment. It was rather unfair to taunt the Government with not having sta istics at hand, when it is known that none exists, necessity compelled the imperfect ma-terials to be brought down as basis.

Messrs. Nelson and Humphreys made furthr observations. The vote being taken was lost 9 to 5; in favor, Nelson, Carrall, Humphreys, Cornwall and Skinner.

The amendment proposed to give four members to the Cariboo District—one to be taken from Metchosin-Esquimalt, in addition to the three named in the general scheme—and would subdivide Cariboo as follows:— William Creek and vicinity, two members; Soda Creek, Quesnellemouth and vicinity, one member; and the northern and remain-

Cornwall and Humbreys, who had spoken on this part of the subject, Hon Mr. Trutch said the boundary lines of those districts already established gave much difficulty. No surveys had been made on the Mainland, except around New Westminster, and if it were attempted to do so, it would be found impossible to make any other boundaries of districts than those any other boundaries of districts than those forced to believe, the Canadian Government would not recognize the distinction. He would like to itself.

The Attorney General said, unless district vere correctly marked, and unless they could get proper metes and bounds, it would create a great deal of confusion at election times, &c. He agreed that the districts are far too large at the present time.

Nr. Uornwall replied that the matter was so harried up, he was not fully prepared what to do. He favored that the Committee rise and report progress.

Lost—and the clause passed.

The clause providing three members for Mr. Cornwall moved that the district be subdivided as follows: Hope, Yale and Lytton. 2. From Lytton, including the Thompson river country, Nicola and Shuswap. 3. The remainder of the district. Each subdivision to be represented by one member.

The Government members said, if the The Government members said, if the amendment in that share passed, it would be utterly impossible to do anything. They had not the least objection to the proposition, if hon, gentlemen would only submit proper boundaries.

the name of a single Barrister from England. the name of a single Barrister from England. He would be correct in stating, that it did not receive the approval of the Judges. The whole profession ought to have had the opdortunity of giving their views. It was a one-sided affair altogether—it would have only the effect of lowering the dignity of the profession of a Barrister. The Colony would enjoy the unique distinction of abolishing, a distinction, which in ne other Colony but this it crists. He believed that the Attorneys this it exists. intermingled, and never was a greater curse, told by eminent American lawyers, that same curse existed there, and they were astonished to see the way business of that sort, was conducted in England. He considered a Bill of the sort no advantage to the community; here it a good deal of misapprehension, as to the distinction which exists—the fact is, Attorneys can now conduct any case for which they may be retained, if they choose: in no instance on the Island, had the Barrister undertaken the Attorney's work, or the Attorney to Barrister's work, or the Attorney to Barrister's work—they may do it. He ney the Barrister's work-they may do it. He (the Attorney General) must confess, he (the Attorney General) must contess, he could not see what they had to complain of. If they complained, they were not allowed to dress-or to wear wigs-for his part, he would only like to do without one. It is presumable, that a man who occupies himself with one branch of the paofession, is more fitted to deal with it, than one who undertakes many. The probability is, that if the Barristers undertook to do the Attorney's work, the letter would be driven from the field. He

Mr. DeCosmos, on account of the infancy of the Colony, would be inclined to vote for the Bill. He did'nt see that in this Colony the distinction should be kept up. Let the status be kept, but he should like to see a provision that anyone qualified to practice as barrister or attorney.

On the question being put the vote was 6 to 6, and the Speaker gave his casting rote against the second reading. Messrs. Skinner, Bunster, DeCosmos, Humphreys, Nathan and Helmcken in Iavor; Messrs. Carrall and Nelson did'ut vote, and the remainder of the House were against it.

Some districts on the Island, proposed to be represented, were not five miles in extent, while Mainland districts, 300 by 400 miles, Hon. Mr. Trutch supplemented the last remarks; the Government believed the white population of the Island to be larger than that of the Maidland—it was framed on the reports of Magistrates and an informal census.

From all the Government could learn, it was believed the Island had the preponderance in the number of population, as compared with the Hainland; but there were other things which modified the views of the Executive.

He (Mr. DeCosmos) had kept a run of the population, and he believed the majority of the population of the Calesy would, to-day, be found on the Island; but having a regard to the extent of the Mainland, the Government acted judiciously in giving the Mainland portion of the Colony, a majority of representation. He took it, that the Island possessed a larger population than the Mainland. The hon, gentleman quoted from a Blue book which he held in his head, a return of the population of the Colony for 'CP, which gives ber from Yale, for instance, and give him to ber from Yale, for instance, and give him to New Westminster, he would not mind; but to take one from an Island district, to be given to the Mainland, he would decidedly object.
